WHAT TO KNOW ABOUT WINDOW REPLACEMENT

Windows are a key element in how your home functions as well as how it looks. If you need new windows, you may have an inkling already, but it's not just guesswork. A few tips to determine if replacement windows are right for your home:

- Window glass, window frames, and window operability deteriorate over time, and windows in older homes often need to be replaced.
- Older windows that don't have proper insulation from heat, cold, and noise can be a nuisance. Builder grade windows begin to deteriorate after 5-10 years.
- Replacing your windows with modern, energy-efficient windows can lower your energy bills and improve the look of your home.

Buying new windows is not something you do every day.

One of the most important things to research when shopping for replacement windows is the warranty the company offers. Window companies that don't manufacture their own windows may not be as knowledgeable about the product, and you may also pay more for the product because they likely mark up the price. Learn as much as you can about the design qualities, manufacturing, and installation process so there are no surprises or hidden costs.
